DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

The previous restriction requirement has been withdrawn as improper by the examiner.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.

Claims 51 and 72-77 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Goheen as modified by Mittal.

Goheen discloses a ticketing and reservation system (title) that works over a network (col 5, lines 5-7), and can be used for automobile rentals (abstract, 16-10), the authorized user (1) makes a reservation (60), and the reservation is processed (fig 1A), the authorized purchaser could be a business organization (travel agency, 1 in fig 1A) or a person (passenger, 1 in fig 1A), the second business organization would be the rental agency (2 in fig 1A). Billing information would be available to the purchaser (4,8 in fig 1A). The computer system saves information on the agreement in a database (fig 1A) which information is accessible by purchaser (12 in fig 1B) and configured to generate reports relating to the reservation (12 in fig 1B), this would constitute communicating messages between the purchaser and any others having access to the program. There is further a second computer system (ATM terminals) that is linked to the first system and that is related to the actual storage spots of the rental cars (they are said to be at the airport terminal, 12 in fig 1B, and therefore would be near the cars rented). Goheen further teaches that a human need not be involved in the final settlement of the agreement as the purchaser can receive the keys to the car at the ATM terminals (col 8, line 38-41). It would, of necessity, limit the functionality available to the service providers.

Goheen does not, however, teach using the internet, or having a computer instead of a person responding to the purchasers, or specifically discuss allowing the user to modify the agreement, or mention including vehicle repair facilities to be connected or using a WAN in the second computer system or using a GUI interface.

Using a WAN is very well known in the art, as is shown in Mittal (135) and therefore it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to connect the ATMs to the central computer via a WAN to keep them connected to each other. It further would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to allow an automobile repair facility to access the system as they are known to need rental vehicles as so-called 'loaner cars' for customers whose repairs might take a long time would thus require a rental vehicle. Insurance agencies routinely allow rental charges for customers whose automobile will require extensive repairs and who would thus be inconvenienced by a long period without an automobile. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to allow the system to be used to modify the order as this is well known in the art. Customers frequently change their orders and indeed, many companies, such as airline agencies, have a fee schedule for such occurrences.

Art Unit: 3629

Mittal teaches a method and apparatus for interacting with on-line services. Mittal discloses a computer (136) connected through the Internet (col 4, lines 5-6), using a GUI interface (132). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to modify the system as disclosed by Goheen with the internet based, computer operated system as taught by Mittal to further automate the process of renting automobiles.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 1-6,8-18,20-23,52-71, and 78-82 are allowed.

The prior art does not teach the system as being bi-directional with an associated repair agency, such a modification would not be obvious while such a modification would be advantageous.
